A Personal Letter from Will Steger

January, 2007

Hello Educators and Friends of the Earth,

I want to invite you and your community to participate in my upcoming expedition. On February 15 my Global Warming 101 Expedition team will embark on a 1,200 mile dogsled journey across the Canadian Arctic's Baffin Island. Baffin Island is twenty-percent larger than the state of California, is covered in mountains, glaciers, fjords and Yosemite-like cliffs and is home to polar bear, walrus, Arctic fox, seals and Inuit people. The Inuit communities on Baffin Island are some of the most remote in the world.

Baffin Island is also ground zero of Global Warming. Nowhere on earth is the climate changing more rapidly or more dramatically. The mainstream media and the general public, however, do not see these changes. The goal of my Global Warming 101 Expedition is to bring these experiences to you and millions of other learners via multimedia daily expedition updates on Globalwarming101.com.

Through daily photos, video clips, audio blogs and diaries on Globalwarming101.com you and your community will be able to witness the impact of climate change on Inuit communities and Arctic ecosystems. Until recently, the traditional Inuit lifestyle had changed little in the past 5,000 years. Now, however, the ice-hunting season has been cut in half, elders can no longer predict the weather, new animals are arriving for which the elders have no names and polar bears are beginning to enter villages in search of food. The Inuit hunters on the expedition team and the Inuit community members in villages along the expedition route will share with you on Globalwarming101.com their stories of being on the front lines of climate change.

To help you follow the Global Warming 101 Expedition, my good friends at Shaklee Corporation, America's number one natural nutrition company and the first to be certified Climate Neutral™, has made available a poster size map of Baffin Island. In keeping with Shaklee's philosophy In Harmony with Nature®, this map is printed on recycled paper with four-color soy ink. Please share this map with your community.

Globalwarming101.com also has National Geographic-approved lesson plans, discussion starters, resources, an interactive forum and opportunities for action. These resources are all free. I hope you will share them with your community, family, children and students.

Global warming is the most serious challenge facing our society. We have a responsibility to educate ourselves and to act now to slow climate change. We also have a responsibility to educate our children and empower them to find solutions. It is not too late to avoid the most severe effects of global warming, but we must act now. There are solutions available.

I ask you and your community to join me on this expedition and begin to discover what you can do to slow global warming.

With deep respect,
